

Best Places in California to See Wildflowers with Kids This Spring

03/13/2017 10:59 am ET | Updated 1 day ago

FLICKR: MARC COOPER

Death Valley is one of the best places to see wildflowers in California with kids.

Spring is coming, and with it comes wildflowers. The unexpected California rains the past couple months means nature lovers are in for a special treat come springtime. There are any number of fantastic gardens and well-manicured flower-filled parks. But there's something a little more unique with fields of wildflowers. One of the best things about seeking wildflower fields is it'll take you to off the beaten path destinations that are kid-friendly. Take advantage of the upcoming spring break to find the best places to see wildflowers.

Best places to see wildflowers in Southern California

Antelope Valley California Poppy Reserve. One of the best places to see wildflowers in California is only an hour and a half north of LA. Near Lancaster, the Antelope Valley California Poppy Reserve is undoubtedly a treasure. Sheets of bright orange flowers blanket the land between February and May. Take advantage of your spring break by hiking the 7 miles of trails within the reserve. While in the area, explore the kid-friendly Castaic Lake on boat. If you're going to explore further, stay at the Homewood Suites by Hilton in downtown Lancaster.